THE PENN WELLS HOTEL

In 1869 A.P. Cone erected a four-story brick hotel on Wellsboro's Main Street. Over the next several decades the hotel operated under different names and owners. On a subzero March morning in 1906, a fire destroyed the fourth story of the building. No one was hurt, and once the damaged fourth story was removed, business resumed as normal. In 1925 a group of local residents bought the property and formed the Wellsboro Hotel Company.

After much debate over whether the historic building should be refurbished or torn down and replaced with a modern facility, the former won out and the Hotel was closed for extensive remodeling. They rebuilt the fourth floor and added a sprinkler system to protect the Hotel from future fires. The Hotel reopened the next year as the Penn Wells Hotel.

A reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer called it "the gem of the Roosevelt Highway," and the Penn Wells was known as one of the classiest hotels with the best service and amenities in Pennsylvania. It became a destination in and of itself as well as a stopping point on the way through untamed northern Pennsylvania. A regular bus service ran from New York's Waldorf-Astoria to the Hotel in the late 20s and the Penn Wells became a popular stopping point for passengers traveling between New York City and Chicago.

Today the Penn Wells Hotel is a proud member of the Historic Hotels of America, the official program of the National Trust for Historic Preservation which recognizes and celebrates the finest Historic Hotels.
